

How to get started with Kanban

- 1. Define the start and end points for the Kanban system.
These should preferably be where you have control.
- 2. Define your Definition of Ready and Definition of Done.
- 3. Map your process (value stream).
What are all the steps that the work goes through until it's sitting in the hands of the customer? Remember that only READY work should be worked on and all completed work should meet the Definition of Done.
- 4. Draw up a Kanban board.
All you need is a whiteboard and some Post-It™ notes. Don't spend too much time making it look beautiful because it will almost certainly evolve.
- 5. As a team, create working agreements and post them:
 - o Initial WIP limits and policies for changing or temporarily breaking them
 - o Process for prioritizing and selecting features
 - o Policies for different classes of service (e.g. "standard", "expedite", "fixed delivery date"). Are estimates needed? When choosing work, which will be selected first (hint, work closest to completion, blockers, urgent work)?
 - o Daily Stand-ups
 - o What should be reviewed with the Product Owner and frequency of reviews?
 - o New features should be reviewed by PO, maintenance work probably does not.
 - o Cadence of retrospectives
 - o How the backlog will be replenished and made ready: could be regularly scheduled Backlog Grooming meetings or on demand as the Ready backlog items get consumed.
- 6. Start using it. Measure and track the cycle time and lead time.
 - o Cycle time: the time from entry to exit of the "work" area of the Kanban board.
 - o Lead time: Cycle time + time prior to working on an item. The total time the client is waiting for an item to be delivered
- 7. Identify and Remove Bottlenecks. Is work getting stacked up in a particular state? The goal is for there to be a smooth flow of work through the system.
- 8. Improve. Implement improvements identified during the retrospectives.
