

DNA Replication

Big Picture

DNA replication occurs during the S phase (synthesis phase) in the cell cycle for each strand of the double helix parent DNA. As cell divide and replicate, more DNA must be made. Because each complementary strand run in different directions, the process of DNA replication works differently for each strand.

Key Terms

DNA Replication: The process in which a cell's entire DNA is copied.

DNA Helicase: The enzyme that breaks the hydrogen bonds holding the two DNA strands together during DNA replication.

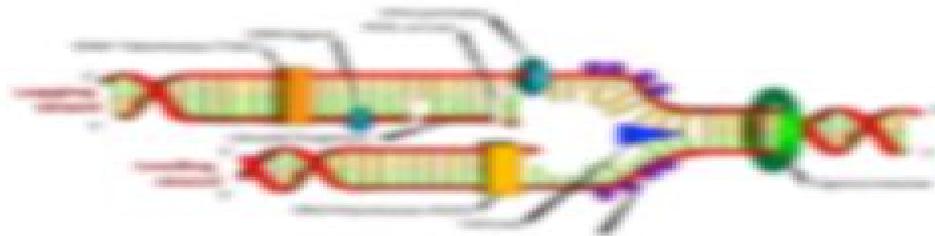

DNA Polymerase: The enzyme that builds a new DNA strand during DNA replication.

Leading Strand: The DNA strand that DNA polymerase constructs in the 5' → 3' direction.

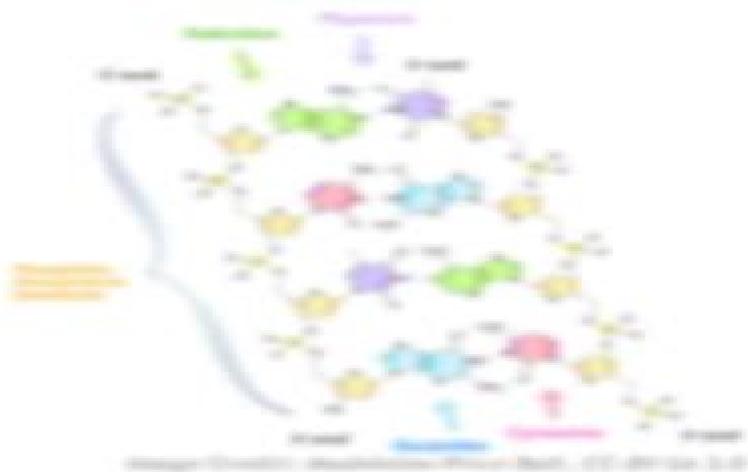

Lagging Strand: The DNA strand at the opposite side of the replication fork from the leading strand.

Primase: An enzyme that builds a short RNA primer on the lagging strand during DNA replication.

Okazaki Fragment: Short fragments of DNA that comprise the lagging strand.

How It Works

In DNA replication, the parent DNA strands must be unwound by DNA helicase, which breaks the hydrogen bonds holding the two strands together. Helicase breaks the DNA unwinding the strands from existing fork regions, and as it moves ahead helicase creates the double-strand breaks for DNA to fill into a fork structure.

DNA polymerase creates the complementary DNA strand in the opposite direction of the parent DNA.

Primase: This enzyme builds RNA primers on the lagging strand.

DNA polymerase continues with a new DNA base pair, creating of the new complementary strand and the lagging strand.

Each DNA molecule is "discontinuous" because DNA polymerase can only synthesize DNA in the 5' → 3' direction, and the 3' strand grows in the 3' → 5' direction.

DNA polymerase only creates the new DNA strand in the 5' → 3' direction, so it needs different strategies to which strand to use. On the leading strand, which runs from 5' → 3', DNA polymerase will work continuously as the replication fork goes.

What Happens Next?

The double-strand separated the original DNA completely, effectively lagging strand. DNA polymerase cannot work continuously in the 3' → 5' direction. To follow the 3' → 5' direction, the complementary strand, polymerase builds a new DNA strand. DNA polymerase then creates the small gaps between DNA in the 3' → 5' direction. In this region, the new DNA strand takes the form. The protein then repairs and fills out the lagging strand's surface. These small DNA fragments are called Okazaki fragments.
