Using GeoLab

This guide will provide a basic idea of the main functionality of GeoLab and how to go about running an adjustment procedure.

An adjustment is a statistical process that takes as inputs at least one Known Station and one or more Unknown Stations, as well as Observations and their Statistical Uncertainties between the Known and Unknown Stations.

A station could be as simple as a point on the ground, marked with a pin/nail and measured with a GPS. An observation could be the distance between this and another point and the uncertainty could be that observation's standard deviation.

For more information, see GeoLab's Adjustment Procedure.
